Companion care focuses on providing social, emotional, and physical support that improves one's quality of life and allows one to thrive. Companion care is provided in the comfort of home, wherever home may be. Whether a long-time family home, independent living, assisted living, or nursing home.

They provide a variety of companion care options that couples social and emotional support with a range of non-medical services that help make life more manageable and enjoyable. These services include light housekeeping, assistance with activities of daily living (bathing, dressing, hygiene, eating, etc.) medication reminders, transportation, and more.

Their caregivers can help with activities that include: social events and friend visits, dentist and doctor visits, shopping and errands, scrapbooking, gardening, going for walks, visiting favorite restaurants, caring for a pet, meal prepping, washing dishes or clothes, and other simple companionship offerings to alleviate solitude and loneliness.
